Description

American Goldfinch on Birch Log

Often called the "wild canary," the American Goldfinch lives throughout North America. It is easily identified by its bright yellow color and its roller-coaster flight pattern. It is often found eating dandelion seeds. This bright yellow goldfinch carving is mounted on a birch log from the New Hampshire woods. The goldfinch is life-sized measuring 4.5 inches from beak to tail and 2.75 inches from head to foot. The carving has an overall height of 4.25 inches.

All of our life-size birds are hand-carved from basswood (a very carveable wood that does not split and takes paint well), feathered to show detail, hand-painted with acrylic paint and have glass eyes and metal feet.
